Extent: 110 boxes, 55 linear feet

Language: English

Repository: Drew University Library, Madison NJ

Biographical Note

Richard Louis “Dixie” Walker (1922-2003) was an international scholar, diplomat, and author. He served as the United States Ambassador to the Republic of Korea from 1981-1986. Walker gained his first experiences in Asia while serving in World War II, from 1943-1946. He served as a Mandarin Chinese translator under General Douglas MacArthur in the Pacific Theater of Operations. During and after his military service, Walker earned his B.A. from Drew University (1944) and M.A. and Ph.D. from Yale University (1947 and 1950, respectively).

He taught at Yale until 1957, when he helped begin a new program in international studies at the University of South Carolina, which he led until 1972. In 1961, Walker founded the Institute of International Studies, which he headed until 1981. In 1996, the institute was renamed in his honor as the Richard L. Walker Institute.

In 1981, Walker left the University of South Carolina when he was chosen by President Ronald Reagan to serve as Ambassador to the Republic of Korea. Walker was unanimously confirmed by the U.S. Senate and went on to serve as ambassador until 1986—the longest tenure of any American ambassador to South Korea. During his time as ambassador, Walker was instrumental in freeing political prisoner Kim Dae-Jung, who would later serve as the president of South Korea (1998-2003).

Upon leaving his ambassadorship, Walker returned to the University of South Carolina and worked within the field of international studies. He retired in the mid-1990s as the James F. Byrnes Professor Emeritus of International Studies and Ambassador-in-Residence at USC. During his tenure, Walker served as a visiting scholar or lecturer in Korea, Japan, Taiwan, and China—as well as throughout Europe and the United States.

Walker was academically active throughout his lifetime, publishing 17 books, contributing to more than 70 other books, and writing numerous articles and reviews. His first major work was China Under Communism: The First Five Years (1956), a study of public life and culture under the communist regime of the People’s Republic of China. His memoirs, recounting life in Korea, were published in 1998.

Walker was married to Celeno Kenly “Ceny” Walker for 45 years. A portion of the collection contains materials from Ceny Walker’s personal files (see Series VIII). The couple had three children, Anne, Geoffrey, and Bradley. Richard “Dixie” Walker died on July 22, 2003.

Scope and Content Note

The Richard L. Walker Papers contain correspondence, research materials, manuscripts, typescripts, publication materials, conference/event materials, government documents, memorabilia, visual and audio media, and posthumous papers. This collection portrays the professional, political, and personal life of Richard Walker and his wife, Ceny (whose collected papers can be found in Series VIII of the collection). The collection materials range from Walker’s high school days in the 1940s until his death in 2003.
